TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on October 5, 2016 at 8:30 a.m., or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard in Department 16 of the above-entitled court, located at 300 East Olive, Porterville, CA 93257, Non-Party Deponent Paul William Grenier will move the Court for a protective order concerning his deposition testimony. Mr. Grenier has been subpoenaed to appear for his deposition and is informed and believes the questioning will concern the allegations of physical and sexual abuse that form the basis of the Complaint in this action. Mr. Grenier does not seek an order limiting the deposition questioning. Rather, he seeks an order that such deposition testimony and transcript be marked confidential so that the parties are precluded from disclosing it outside of court proceedings and may only use it in connection with the litigation, unless specifically authorized by the Court to do otherwise. The protective order proposed by Non-Party Deponent Paul William Grenier is attached as Exhibit F to the Declaration of Alan J. Gordee filed concurrently herewith.

This Motion will be, and is, made pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure § 2025.420 and is necessary to preserve Mr. Grenier's right to privacy as protected by the California Constitution, Article I, §1. This Motion is further based on this Notice, the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the Declarations of Alan J. Gordee and Paul William Grenier, filed concurrently herewith; upon the records and files in this action; and upon such further evidence and argument as may be presented prior to or at the time of hearing on the Motion. This Motion is made following the conclusion of meet and confer discussions between the parties.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The Complaint in this action alleges that Defendant Alex Grenier ("Defendant") defamed Plaintiffs Bob and Gayle Grenier ("Plaintiffs) and intentionally inflicted emotional distress on them by, among other things, falsely accusing Plaintiff Bob Grenier on social media, websites and internet blog posts of physical and sexual abuse. Non-Party Deponent Paul William Grenier ("Grenier") is not a plaintiff or defendant in this action. He is an alleged witness to some of the allegations leveled by Defendant against Plaintiffs. Grenier has been subpoenaed by the parties to give a deposition. Grenier's deposition is currently in abeyance pending this Court's ruling on this Motion. Grenier, however, remains under subpoena and has agreed to appear after this Motion is decided by the Court.

Grenier believes that Plaintiffs and Defendant intend to depose him about matters related to Defendant's allegations of physical and sexual abuse. He does not seek by this Motion to limit such inquiries. But he is concerned about how his testimony may be used after he has given it.

Specifically, Grenier is concerned that Defendant will excerpt some of the testimony and post those excerpts on his Facebook page or other social media or websites. This is not an idle concern as Defendant has made such posts in the past with respect to other depositions taken in this lawsuit. Given the nature of the testimony Grenier believes the parties may attempt to elicit, such disclosure beyond the legitimate needs of the parties in the litigation will subject him to unnecessary annoyance, embarrassment and oppression. Accordingly, by this Motion, Grenier seeks a protective order to prevent the parties from disclosing his deposition testimony to persons who have no legitimate use for it and to cabin its use only for purposes of this litigation.

II. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs allege in the Complaint that they are the mother and stepfather of Defendant. Complaint, ¶ 8. They allege that Defendant has conducted a "cyber-bully hate campaign" against them by, among other things, accusing Plaintiff Bob Grenier of being "a liar, thief, child-molester, pedophile, spousal abuser, master manipulator, cult leader, and evil person" who is "operating [Calvary Chapel-Visalia] for the sole purpose of stroking [his] ego, lining his wallet with wrongfully taken church tithes, and promoting a hidden agenda that solely promotes only [their] lifestyle." Id., ¶¶ 15, 17. In connection with Defendant's "cyber-bully hate campaign," Plaintiffs allege, he "utilize[es] the internet to contact more individuals and post more hateful rhetoric." Id., ¶ 18. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant posts "information about [Plaintiffs] daily, if not hour-by-hour, utilizing a minimum of nine internet websites, including two websites that are owned and moderated by [Defendant] himself, for the sole purpose of continuing the hate campaign aimed at ruining the credibility of [Plaintiffs], threatening their livelihood, as well as intimidating and threatening [Plaintiffs'] health and safety. Id., ¶ 19. Plaintiffs allege that Defendant has made more than 6,000 social media posts about them. Id.

As a result, Plaintiffs brought this action. In it, they assert claims for, among other things, intentional infliction of emotional distress, libel and slander, and seek general, specific and punitive damages. In connection with this lawsuit, the parties have engaged in discovery, including depositions. Defendant has in the past posted commentary on social media about such discovery, including summarizing or otherwise disclosing or commenting on the testimony elicited during such depositions. See Declaration of Paul William Grenier ("Grenier Decl."), ¶ 3; Ex. A.

III. ARGUMENT

A. The Court Has The Power to Issue A Protective Order To Govern The Use Of Deposition Testimony

For good cause shown, the Court may grant a protective order to control deposition proceedings or the information obtained in an deposition. See Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2025.420. Indeed, the Court is empowered to issue whatever order "justice requires" to protect a party from "unwarranted, annoyance, embarrassment, or oppression" Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2025.420(b); see Brigante v. Huang, 20 Cal. App. 4th 1569, 1583 (1993) ("The court is empowered to fashion a remedy that will do justice in the situation with which it is confronted"). This protection can be obtained by any party or non-party deponent. Cal Civ. Proc. Code § 2025.420(a). This protection extends to the dissemination of information obtained through pretrial discovery, which is not automatically part of the public domain. Indeed, the Court may use a protective order to prohibit public disclosure of deposition testimony that has not yet been introduced into evidence at a public trial. Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, 467 U.S. 20, 33 (1984).

B. Grounds Exist For A Protective Order Limiting The Parties' Use Of Grenier's Deposition Testimony

The constitutional right of privacy is a fundamental liberty arising from both the United States and the California Constitutions. Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965); Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438 (1972); Morales v. Superior Court, 99 Cal. App. 3d 283, 289 (1979); Fults v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. App. 3d 899, 903–904 (1979). The California right has been described as a protective "zone of privacy" surrounding sexual behavior. Fults, 88 Cal. App. 3d at 904. It is grounded in a 1972 initiative by which the voters of California added the right of privacy to Article I, Section 1 of the California Constitution. See White v. Davis, 13 Cal. 3d 757, 773–775 (1975). The right has been reaffirmed by the California Supreme Court in Vinson v. Superior Court, 43 Cal. 3d 833, 841 (1987) ("California accords privacy the constitutional status of an 'inalienable right,' on a par with defending life and possessing property" and the "privacy protection ... embraces sexual relations."). Aspects of the right of privacy, such as associational privacy, the privacy of personal bank records, and the right of sexual privacy, may be asserted by a litigant by refusing to answer questions which "unreasonably intrude" on the right. Fults, 88 Cal. App. 3d at 903; Britt v. Superior Court, 20 Cal. 3d 844 (1978) (associational privacy); Valley Bank of Nevada v. Superior Court, 15 Cal. 3d 652 (1975) (bank records).

Of course, the privacy right is not absolute and disclosure may be compelled in court proceedings. City of Santa Barbara v. Adamson, 27 Cal. 3d 123, 131 (1980); Loder v. Municipal Court, 17 Cal. 3d 859, 864 (1976); White v. Davis, 13 Cal. 3d at 775. One such interest, evidenced by California's broad discovery statutes, is "the historically important state interest of facilitating the ascertainment of truth in connection with legal proceedings." Britt, 20 Cal. 3d at 857. The party seeking court-ordered discovery must shoulder this heavy burden, and must establish more than "merely ... a rational relationship to some colorable state interest"; "[o]nly the gravest abuses, endangering paramount interests, give occasion for permissible limitation" on the right of privacy. Morales, 99 Cal. App. 3d at 290 (quoting Britt, 20 Cal. 3d at 855). Courts "must balance the right of civil litigants to discover relevant facts against the privacy interests of persons subject to discovery." Vinson, 43 Cal. 3d at 842 (quoting Valley Bank, 15 Cal. 3d at 657).

When an individual's right of privacy conflicts with the public need for discovery in litigation, the competing interests must be carefully balanced. Valley Bank of Nevada, 15 Cal. 3d at 657. Even where the balance weighs in favor of disclosure of private information, an intrusion upon privacy may only be done on the basis of "practical necessity" (Fults, 88 Cal. App. 3d at 904–905) and "the compelled disclosure [must] be narrowly drawn to assure maximum protection of the constitutional interests at stake." Britt, 20 Cal. 3d at 859.

Here, unlike the situations in the cases cited above, Grenier does not seek to restrict the scope of discovery or deny that Plaintiffs and Defendant are entitled to discover the details of his past that concern the allegations of the Complaint and the defenses to those allegations. Rather, Grenier simply requests that the Court limit the parties' use of his deposition testimony. He requests that the Court issue a protective order "limiting dissemination of the information [in his deposition transcript] to counsel for the parties and to such other persons related to the litigation" to whom counsel believes such dissemination is necessary to prepare the matter for trial. Moskowitz v. Superior Court, 137 Cal. App. 3d 313, 315 (1982). Stated another way, Grenier seeks only to prevent disclosure of the testimony he may give relating to the allegations of the Complaint to persons who have no legitimate interest in its use for purposes of the litigation. The fact that Grenier is attempting to restrict the use of the facts discovered in his deposition, rather than the scope of the discovery itself, however, does not justify denial of his constitutional right of privacy in the personal information that may be divulged during his deposition.

A substantial probability exists that Grenier's overriding privacy interest will be prejudiced if the use of his deposition testimony is not limited to matters relating to this litigation. Grenier is informed and believes both Plaintiffs and Defendant intend to depose him as to matters related to Defendant's allegations of physical and sexual abuse. The Complaint itself arises from Defendant's alleged publication of defamatory statements about Plaintiffs in internet postings. Grenier is aware that Defendant has made numerous internet postings about this lawsuit and uses the internet to comment on, among other things, deposition testimony taken in discovery during this lawsuit. See Grenier Decl., ¶ 3; Ex. A. Based on Defendant's previous behavior, there is a substantial probability Grenier's right to privacy will be violated if the parties are not ordered by the Court to use the testimony elicited in his deposition only in connection with the litigation and for no other purpose such as to publicize Defendant's litigation position or to comment on the coerced testimony of Grenier in social media or internet websites or blog postings.

Given Defendant's past publication of deposition testimony and other discovery proceedings in this lawsuit on social media such as Facebook and internet websites and in blog postings, Grenier has clearly established a factual showing of the potential invasion of his privacy and the annoyance, embarrassment or oppression that would result from the parties' unlimited use of his deposition testimony. See Grenier Decl., ¶¶ 3-4; Ex. A.

Indeed, Grenier is presumptively entitled to a protective order limiting dissemination of the testimony contained in his deposition, and the burden therefore is on Defendant to show that such relief is not warranted. Richards v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. App. 3d 265 (1978). In Richards, the court stated:

[W]here a party is compelled in civil discovery to reveal financial information because the information is relevant to the subject matter of a claim for punitive damages, that party is, upon his motion, presumptively entitled to a protective order that the information need be revealed only to counsel for the discovering party or to counsel's representative, and that once so revealed, the information may be used only for the purposes of the lawsuit. The burden is on the opposing party to establish a substantial reason why the order should be denied. That reason must be related to the lawsuit.

Richards, 86 Cal. App. 3d at 272.

Moreover, as the court observed in Richards:

Discovery seeking financial information by reason of a claim for punitive damages is one classic instance of the manner in which civil discovery is used to achieve a litigation advantage never contemplated when the methodology was introduced into pretrial procedure [T]here is usually the potential that untoward disclosure of the information obtained may in some way or other react adversely against the disclosing party for reasons totally unrelated to the lawsuit. The possibilities run all the way from greater exposure to the not so gentle solicitations of some charitable organizations to the possibility of damage to the discloser in the competitive business arena.... [¶] ... It seems a rare instance indeed that the potential of disclosure for purposes unrelated to the lawsuit or to persons other than counsel and their representatives serves any purpose except to give a tactical edge to the party who has obtained discovery of the information by allowing that party the benefit of pressure in settlement negotiations by threat or implication of disclosure.

Richards, 86 Cal. App. 3d at 271-272.

While the protective order in Richards was sought by a defendant against whom a claim for punitive damages was asserted, its reasoning is applicable here, where a non-party is seeking a protective order limiting to legitimate purposes the use of his coerced testimony concerning his personal sexual and medical history obtained through discovery in a case in which he has no personal interest because he is not even a party. Accordingly, the burden is upon Defendant to establish a reason, related to the lawsuit, for denial of the protective order sought by Grenier.

IV. CONCLUSION

Although the allegations of the Complaint may make Grenier's testimony discoverable, these allegations do not strip him of his right to privacy. Indeed, his privacy is presumptively entitled to protection: "The one whose privacy is involved is presumptively entitled to a protective order limiting the use of the information to the litigation itself, and barring its dissemination for purposes not related to a fair resolution of the action." Babcock v. Superior Court, 29 Cal. App. 4th 721, 728 (1994). Grenier merely seeks an order requiring the parties to use his coerced testimony only for purposes of the litigation and he specifically seeks to prevent the parties (in reality, Defendant) from using his coerced testimony in ways unrelated to the litigation and specifically to preclude the parties from posting that testimony on social media, on his or any websites, or in blog posts. For the foregoing reasons, Grenier respectfully requests the Court enter a protective order that makes his ///
